Community Concerns Graphic.pdf

Hi Robert and Mike,

Here's an example of the speech bubble graphic to illustrate community concerns that Blair mentioned on the phone.

Thanks,

Emily

Hi Robert and Mike,

We wanted to send some examples of graphics that we've used in other CIPs and projects ahead of our call so we can take a look at them together when we talk today.

Thanks,

Emily

Hi Emily,

Please find attached draft CIP with some initial feedback. Sorry about the delay in turning this around to you.

This is a good start! Thank for your work.

You will see from my comments a few basic thoughts:

- reorganize some content – I'd like to prioritize the results of our assessment (community concerns, preferences, and our strategy) by moving them up in the document and slide the site background information (information already found in other places) to later sections.

- separate out and define the community concerns a bit more. We can use the interviews plus information we collected elsewhere to do this.
- Reduce content to the extent possible. I've made a few slashes and suggestions on wordsmithing.

Perhaps we can discuss my feedback and schedule adjustments in a call together soon. I realize that we are a bit behind the schedule that was outlined in the 8/2016 project approach. And with the holidays, I imagine we may have some further challenges with meeting the schedule moving forward. I am in the office M – Th next week and will be out the following week Dec 5 – 9. I will be in most the rest of the year. I am optimistic that we can have a final draft for public feedback before the end of the year or soon after. Please let me know your thoughts.

Thanks again for your work on this.

Hi Mike and Robert,

Please see attached for the draft text of the CFAC CIP. Our goal was to write as concisely as possible while still including everything listed in the comprehensive outline. We have flagged some portions that we don't typically include in our more streamlined CIPs, so you can decide what you would like to keep. We have also included some comments in the margins for your consideration.

Please let us know if there are any questions or if you would like to discuss more. We look forward to receiving your comments on the draft.

Thanks,
Emily
